

How Melio makes business payments more flexible and reliable

Your business deals with tens and even 100s of payments every day – from paying vendors, suppliers and contractors to covering your business' rent, tax and utility bills. With Melio, paying them all is easier than ever.

Two of the features that actually help you hold onto cash flow and make sure you don't miss a due date are partial payments and recurring payments.

Partial payments mean that a business bill can be split into multiple payments and payment methods. This means you have access to better cash flow management right at your fingertips – you can hold onto cash longer by splitting large payments into small parts. Partial payments feature gives you the flexibility you need to control your expenses and leverage your cash flow in a way that best suits your business's needs.

Recurring payments lets you schedule payments in advance to vendors you pay regularly. The results? You can handle your bill pay more efficiently. No more paying bills too soon or too late, forgetting to pay on time, or not following up on payments. By making recurring payments you maintain good relationships with your vendors as you always pay them on-time automatically.

Speak to your accountant today to see how to use Melio for more reliable, flexible and secure business payments.